

PENNSYLVANIA HOMESCHOOLERS

Table Of Contents

Masthead by Jordan Burns, age 16

COVER STORY

6 How Games and Playing lead to Serious Learning

Susan Richman describes the ways that game playing can be central to our learning at home. Plus: Dianne Settino on “Lessons Learned from Making a Mess,” an easy fraction game, and Ellen McHenry’s basement workshop!

FEATURES

11 For the Love of the Game: A Conversation between Marge and Lois

Carol Lugg imagines how two very different women might see her habit of incorporating sports into her curriculum.

12 Winning the Admissions Game

The author of a new book in the PA Homeschoolers catalogue provides a common-sense, student-centered guide to the college admissions process.

13 Portfolio: Civics in Action

Homeschooler Amy Goldfischer decides to act to reduce littered beer bottles and ends up appearing before the board of commissioners!

27 A Memory For Music

Music teacher Abigail Smyser writes a lyrical account of the way that music impacted her childhood.

IN BRIEF

20 To Diagram or not to Diagram...

28 Homeschooling and Tutoring

COLUMNS

5 Legislative Watch: Private Home Ed. Levels while Total Home Ed. Grows

Howard Richman reports on trends in the numbers of homeschoolers in Pennsylvania, plus legislation that aims to reduce cyber-charter school funding.

24 First Steps: Having Fun

Patricia Richman considers the ways to insure that “fun” has a place in her homeschooling.

22 Peter’s Story: Surprise Challenges, Surprise Gifts (Part 3)

Nancy Emerson finally comes to appreciate the extent not only of her son’s dyslexia, but also of his artistic talent.

26 Graduation and Beyond: Homeschooling Lessons Continue

Sheryl Robel reflects on her daughter’s transition from nervous freshman (or was Sheryl the nervous one?) to college valedictorian.

IN EVERY ISSUE

2 Letter from the Editor

4 Notebook

15 The Backpack

18 Math by Kids

19 Kids & Grads Did It

29 Qualified Evaluators

32 Calendar